White Elephants

John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, unwittingly gave the Athletics their nickname when in 1902 he asserted that Ben Shibe and Connie Mack had a "White Elephant" on their hands in the Athletic franchise.

Philadephia sports writers immediately took up the name and the club that year went on to win the first of its numerous championships.

Interesting Facts

The attendance for the five games of the 1905 World Series between the Athletics and the New York Giants was 91,723. The receipts $68,437. Each New York player received $1,142 and each Athletic player $382 but the Athletic club donated its share of the receipts to its players thus bringing their total to $833.75 per man.

Roger Cramer has the unique distinction of having made six hits in six times at bat on two different occasions.

Jimmie Dykes, now manager of the White Sox, had a big day in the field on August 28, 1921, when he accepted seventeen chances (nine putouts and eight assists) without an error.

Cy Perkins caught thirteen innings without being credited with a putout on May 17, 1922.

The first Athletic pitcher to hurl a no hit-no run game was Weldon Henley, who on July 22, 1905, blanked the St. Louis Browns 6 to 0. The other Athletic twirlers to enter the Hall of Fame were Chief Bender, who shut out Cleveland without a hit or run on May 12, 1910, and Joe Bush, who six years later, on August 26, 1916, picked on the Cleveland Indians for his no-hitter.

Lefty "Bob" Grove led the American League pitchers in 1931 with the almost unbelievable record of 31 wins against 4 defeats. In compiling this record Grove had a string of 16 consecutive victories.

Eddie Collins, now playing an executive role for the Boston Red Sox, had the longest active baseball life of any player in the majors. He started with the Athletics in 1906; went to the White Sox in 1915 and was back with the Athletics from 1927 to 1930 for a total of 25 years' service.
